by

VIOLA MEYNELL

Alice Meynell: A Memoir

THIS biography of Alice Meynell, by her daughter, is the record of her literary activities from the days of the girlhood poems which moved Ruskin more than all else ‘had seen or felt in modern verse,’ down to the later ‘herdess’ and ‘In Honour of America’ – poems taken all together, secured for her in the judgement of some foremost critics, a supremacy amongst all poets of England. Of her Essays which Steadman and which, in Meredith’s words, ‘leave a ringing in the minds they fill,’ we here recreate the spirit that informs them – her ‘complementary life,’ her compassion and her receptivity to the friendly divinely decreed differences of spirit in the United States in 1901–1902 – ‘the ...’ she calls it – has its yielding the headship to his young lieutenant Bandello (called Rico); and of Rico's brief-power, his forced flight from Chicago, the murder of a police captain, and of Rico hiding in Toledo.

A synopsis gives an inadequate and dramatic excitement cisely, so impersonally
reading a newspaper body than comple

ons; still the com-
will win the approval melodramatic fiction, and more than adequate claim to ce of writing.

A Charmed Circle

AN old country house stands obstinate and solitary as a rock against the advancing tide of an ever-expanding manufacturing town. Marooned here, cut off from their own world by mean streets and squalid houses, a family of sensitive individuals has become a group of prisoners preying upon one another's nerves and emotions. The atmosphere of the house is heavy with repression, secret hostility and revolt; darkened by the sinister influence of the father, whose warped and frustrated nature dominates the lives of his wife, his daughters and his son. The struggles of the young people to escape from this malign environment, their desperate searchings for self-expression and for the freedom of their own lives, their apparent successes, lead only to the inevitable, relentless triumph of temperament and upbringing, enclosing them once more in the charmed circle of their limitations.

Author of The Well of Loneliness

Mr. Jonathan Cape announces the republication of the following novels by Miss Radclyffe Hall in a uniform edition

The Unlit Lamp

THIS is the earlier 'problem' novel which made the literary reputation of the author of The Well of Loneliness. 'A brilliant study, handled with ruthless sincerity.' Liverpool Courier. 'Strong and quiet—a very moving picture of a character refreshingly fine.' Observer. 'A novel of uncommon power and fidelity to life.' Daily Telegraph.

Adam's Breed

(Awarded the Femina Vie Heureuse Prize 1925-26, and the James Tait Black Memorial Prize 1926.)

THERE is nothing finer in the fiction of the last decade.' Sunday Times. 'We would not have missed a page.' Observer. 'A tender, deeply moving, and beautifully written story.' Daily Telegraph. 'Every sentence has value and personality.' John o' London. 'The joy of the discriminating—a book to be cherished.' Eastern Daily Press. 'The fruits of long and sympathetic observation of life.' Western Mail.

Pale Warriors

THIS is the story of a lovely woman without scruples. The curious charm of her character pervades the whole book so that the reader feels it always as acutely as do the

NOTE

THE foregoing list contains books which will be ready for publication during the summer and early autumn of 1929, and a recapitulation of those published during the spring. A Complete Catalogue of all books still in print and published by Jonathan Cape up to December, 1928, will be sent free on application to 30 Bedford Square, London.

NOW AND THEN

Now & Then is a periodical of books and personalities, published four times a year from Thirty Bedford Square, by Jonathan Cape. A Publisher is anxious to keep in touch with his public; a periodical of this kind enables him to do this and to introduce the writers of books to their readers.

Among recent contributors have been Thomas Burke, G. K. Chesterton, W. H. Davies, Ford Madox Ford, E. M. Forster, Laurence Housman, Sinclair Lewis, Percy Lubbock, Arthur Machen, André Maurois, G. B. Shaw, H. M. Tomlinson, Hugh Walpole, H. G. Wells, Virginia Woolf, and other writers of to-day.

The paper will be sent free of charge to registered readers, but if two shillings are enclosed to defray postage on the next six issues, and as a contribution towards the cost of production, it will be much appreciated.

Readers can, of course, also register the names and addresses of their friends if they think they will be interested.
